

FFSA is hiring a Senior Divestment Campaigner

Fossil Free SA is a campaign working for an end to the fossil fuel industry in South Africa, particularly through fossil fuel divestment and challenging greenwashing in all its forms. Our core campaigns are for divestment by individuals and institutions, an end to greenwashing by the creative industries, and for bans on fossil fuel advertising.

We are looking for a senior divestment campaigner who will lead the following established campaigns:

- 1) Defossilising universities: For divestment by other SA universities and pension funds
- 2) #InvestFossilFree: Lobbying for fossil fuel investment options from SA's top asset managers.

Your responsibilities will include:

- Working with the director, senior adviser and junior divestment campaigner to devise and implement campaign strategies.
- Organising events, actions and activities in line with the strategic goals of the campaign
- Engaging in face-to-face meetings with key stakeholders and campaign targets
- Keeping abreast of developments in ethical finance and ESG.
- Writing and sending letters and emails to key stakeholders and campaign targets
- Overseeing the website divestment sections
- Overseeing the creation of a team of part-time campaign fieldworkers (student interns)
- Oversee the maintenance of internal tracking systems

You need a clear knowledge and passion for climate, environment and human rights issues (5–10 years), an interest in and some knowledge of finance, and a well-organised, patient and systematic temperament. You need to be a good writer, and be comfortable with organising and participating in protests. This is a remote working position, with occasional in-person meetings with team members and stakeholders, for a Cape Town-based person with their own reliable Internet access and computer. Diversity will be a key consideration in making this appointment.

We are dependent on external funding, so this is a one-year half-time, flexi-time contract position which we hope can be renewed. Annual pay before tax is R200,000. We do not currently offer employee benefits.
